Denise Djokic is in her early 20s, and comes from a large musical family. She trained at the Cleveland Institute of Music and the New England Conservatory. She has already been called "one of the most captivating artists of her generation" and is praised worldwide for the passion, strength and sensitivity of her playing, and her "arrestingly beautiful tone colour" (The Strad). She plays on the "Bonjour" Stradivarius, on loan from the Canada Council for the Arts.

David Jalbert is an equally wonderful young pianist and longstanding musical partner of Denise Djokic. David trained in Canada and the US, and his main teachers include Marc Durand and Leon Fleisher. His first solo CDs are dedicated to works by Corigliano, Rzewski and Fauré and won great applause. He is described as a "deeply musical pianist with an incomparable stage presence."
